In cases in which not substantial distress, but the wish to find meaning and more quality in life motivate people to seek help, the general wish to develop one's own resources as well as the optimization of social integration may also provide the occasion to seek the help of a counsellor.

Key professional competencies

Counsellors with Advanced Swiss Federal Diploma of Professional Education and Training possess extensive counselling competencies in dealing with psychosocial and problematic situations. They

- analyze complex counselling situations
 - produce a comprehensive analysis of the situation, the problem and the available resources
 - prioritize the problem areas and focus on a main problem
 - choose appropriate procedures for the counselling process
 - deal with possibilities and limits of the counselling process as required by the situation

- plan interventions
 - produce a counselling plan aimed at the agreed objectives and structured in terms of time and content
 - consider the social and cultural context
 - creatively shape the counselling process adapted to the prevailing circumstances in an individual
 - plan tried, tested and effective strategies, methods and interventions in a situation-specific manner
- shape the counselling process
 - build up and maintain a counselling relationship of trust
 - show appreciation towards the clients and respond appropriately to their offer of a relationship, their feelings, thoughts and behavior
 - deal appropriately with the processes of transference and counter-transference
 - apply the planned interventions in a creative manner and promote the clients' autonomy
 - agree to a responsible behavior in accordance with ethical principles (such as the SGfB's Code of Ethics)
 - continuously evaluate the counselling process
- recognize situations of crisis and respond to them
 - possess appropriate instruments for dealing with crises and conflicts
 - see to the protection of the individual in situations of risk
 - stabilize situations of crisis with appropriate interventions and observe the limits of their own competencies
 - refer clients to specialist professionals when needed
- ensure quality and professional development
 - reflect planning, realization and evaluation of their professional behavior in connection with their approach to counselling
 - respect the obligation of diligence in record keeping and documentation
 - further develop their counselling competencies by means of supervision, intervision, self-experience, counselling and therapy and permanent continuous education
 - inform their clients about their right of appeal
 - judiciously deal with their own and external resources
 - represent and protect their professional interests
 - contribute to the further development of counselling in the psychosocial field

Professional practice

Counsellors with Advanced Swiss Federal Diploma of Professional Education and Training demonstrate professionalism in psychosocial counselling by combining scientific expertise with a proper understanding of individual problems and by a clear and well-grounded approach to counselling. They assume responsibility for the counselling process and operate autonomously. They are committed to ethical behavior and regular further professional development.

Counsellors with Advanced Swiss Federal Diploma of Professional Education and Training practice in diverse institutions, either self-employed in their own practice or in teams of specialist from various disciplines, as employees in advisory centers, hospitals, relief organizations, non-profit and profit organizations. They have full-time or part-time jobs.

Contribution of the profession to society, nature and culture

Counsellors with Advanced Swiss Federal Diploma of Professional Education and Training make a valuable contribution to the good of society, while supporting individuals in preserving or improving their quality of life and social integration as far as possible, and in meeting the complex demands of society.

In their work, they also respect basic aspects of sustainability and environmental protection.

Further specifications of Counselling in the psychosocial field and the SGfB's Code of Ethics are described in the annex to the guidelines.

1.2 Authority in charge

1.21 The authority in charge is the following organization in the world of work:

The Swiss Association for Counselling, SGfB

1.22 This authority bears responsibility for the whole of Switzerland.

2 ORGANIZATION

2.1 Composition of the examination commission

2.11 All functions in connection with the issuing of diplomas are transferred to the examination commission. The commission consists of at least 6 members and is elected by the authority in charge for a period of 4 years. Members may be re-elected. They are bound by the rules of secrecy.

2.12 The examination commission constitutes itself. It has a quorum when the majority of its members is present. Decisions require a simple majority of the votes of the members present. If the votes are equal, the chair is decisive.

2.2 Functions of the examination commission

2.21 The examination commission
